This is a team game that can be used during sessions or for the intergenerational celebration.

Teams send a runner to the leader who will whisper or show the first word in the list to the runner. The runner then returns to their team and has to act out the word without speaking. The team try to guess the word and, when finally successful, send a runner back to whisper the answer to the leader. The leader then gives the runner the next word on the list to act out. The winning team is the one which is first to guess all the words.

Another variation on this is for the runner to have to draw the word without speaking or writing anything.

A third variation is for the runner to describe the word without actually saying it or saying any derivatives of the word.
